which he used the following language: New York, March 27-Midnight.

I wish to say to the President, in my judgment this is the turning point of his whole Administra-tion--the crisis of his fate. If he surrenders now Conkling is President for the rest of the term and Garfield becomes a laughing stock. On the other hand, he has only to stand firm to succeed. With the unanimous action of the New York Legislature Corkling cannot make an effectual fight. That action came solely from the belief that Gar-field, unlike Hayes, meant to defend his own Administration. The Assembly is overwhelmingly Cook-ling, but they did not dure go on the record against Robertson so long as they though the Ad-ministration seems business, " = " = " We can surely get enough Democratic Senators to offset snything Conkiling can do. In one word, there is no safe or honorable way out now but to go straight on. Hobertson should be held firm, and if a change is made in the surveyor-hip the new man should swit Robertson. Merritt would do perfectly for that place, there he is a good subordinate, or some other good ran could be found. But it is indispensable that the surveyorship should be kept in our own hands.

Boldness and tenacity now insure victory not merely for this year but for the whole term. The least wavering would be fatal. Whenever pres-sure on Platt or James is wanted let us know. Beware of James' soft, instituating way. He is again wholly under Conkling's influence, but storn, sharp admonitten will bring him instantly to his bearings. He ought to have had that the morning after life screenale speech.

WHITELAW REID.

This remarkable document was published in the New York Herald of Friday last and the Tribune of Saturday admits its genuineness. It is an important contribution to the history of the Garfield administration. It shows that there was a fear that the President might withdraw Robertson, and thus avoid the continuance of an unnecessary party disturbance. With malicious craft it labored against such a result, by threatening to make the President "a laughing stock" unless he should prove his independence of Mr.

ecutive power to remain where it had been placed by the nomination of Robertson, The dispatch exhibits Mr. Whitelaw Reid as a very much inflated intermeddler, or else as the spokesman of a set of destructives who were willing to gratify their hatred of Mr. Conkling at no matter what expense to President Garfield's own inclinations, and with total disregard of the effect of their machinations upon the Administration, the party, the country, or the public service. It gives the lie to all the Tribune said during the controversy, as to Mr. Conkling's natural strength and shows the means employed to break it down. It vindicates the truth of THE REPUBLICAN'S assertions throughout that Mr. Conkling's attitude was approved by the New York Legislature, but that he was deprived of the support of that body by the fact so forcibly and elegantly expressed by Mr. Reid that "the Administration meant business," "The Assembly," says this marplot, "is over-WHELMINGLY CONKLING, but they DARE NOT go on the record against Robertson so long as they thought the Administration meant business." And what was this business? At what tender point could the intentions of the Administration so touch the assemblymen that they would not dore to give their honest opinions? What had they to fear? Who carried the threat to them which so paralyzed them? Robertson was a State senator, and would, if confirmed, have thirteen hundred places within his gift. He may have talked the intended "business." Or perhaps this Mr. Reid, whose dispatch reads almost like a military order to President Garfield, was well enough known as the trusted friend of the then Secretary of State to make his assurances sufficient. What court grammar made him n plural is not known. He says " me can surely get enough Democratic Senators to offset anything Conkling can do." Why, certainly. There is always a way to get enough of them if there is a will to do it which will override party obligations. He insists that "the surveyorship should be kept in our own hands." Whose hands: His and the President's? or his and Mr. Blaine's, for whom, perhaps, he more especially could speak? Or was there a crew of conspirators, of which Reid was a member, which was to have the dispensing of patronage? Why must the surveyor, in case of a change, "suit Robertson?" What "victory" was to be insured by "boldness and tenacity?" What reason had Reid to fear that the President would waver and "surrender?" Why was not the President trusted to do right without such goading and spurring? Is it not plain that he desired to withdraw Robertson and should follow his own inclinations and retrace the unfortunate step he had taken? "If he surrenders now Conk-Hing is President." But who was to be President if he surrendered to the solicitations of Reid & Co.? Was it "we"-

If there is sufficient cause, he then holds the person to bail, to answer to any indictment that may be found by the grand jury. thus be taken on the wing. There was a smack of tyranny about this which reflects discredit on its promoters. The mere accusation of one man by another raises no presumption of the former's guilt, and is no ground upon which needlessly to subject a citizen to the degradation of imprisonment. The truth of the accusation must of course be Conkling by allowing the sword of ex-scutive power to remain where it had been disgrace if any one man can dictate his prest, and magistrate and lawyer can then arrange it to snatch him late at night expressly to make bail impossible before the following day. Tombs-shysters in New York resort to such tricks in order to extort money; but wherever decent methodsprevail it should be impossible. Judge Snell greatly abused his authority by the arrests of last Friday night. Neither he nor the Government prosecuting officers could have had any fear that the accused persons were going to run away. The warrants should not have been issued until the next morning, and then the examination should have immediately proceeded. But instead of this the arrests were made late at night, for the obvious purpose of harassing and oppress-

> Then excessive bail was exacted. One man who was on a bidder's bond for $600 was required to give $3,000 bail. The large bail was demanded, Judge Snell said, at the instance of a prosecuting attorney. This is of the Jeffries order of judicial proceeding. That judge became infamous because he allowed himself to be made an instrument of oppression by the Government. The worst feature about the whole busi-

ing the parties. Then, the next day ness is that it is admitted to have been done to prevent a man named Boone from bidding for mail contracts the next day. Who was benefited? Who would have been benefited if Boone had been thus prevented from competing with others? We know nothing of the merits of these cases. We hope to see bogus mailbidders and bogus sureties, wherever they can be found, convicted and punished. But let not the machinery of justice be used for private ends, nor in a tyrannical and arbitrary manner. Courts convict and punish after trial. Every man is presumed to be innocent until found guilty by a jury. The Government cannot afford to tolerate, in those who are intrusted with the power to prosecute offenses, any spirit of persecution, or any contempt for the rights and liberties of citizens.

There is more truth than poetry in the article published on the first page relative to the Marine Corps. A radical change should be made by Congress in the method of appointments. The country is too big and the people too liberal. minded to allow an exclusive aristocratic institution to flourish in our midst. Give the boys in the ranks a chance.

The beautiful verses "Gone Home, on Christmas Morning," which appeared in THE REPUBLICAS of last Saturday, were read at the funeral of the lamented John that the panic-stricken Reid rushed O. Evans, at Fayetteville, N. Y., who at him with the insulting talk of died, it will be remembered, on Christhis being "a laughing stock" if he

One could afferd to laugh at the swollen conceil and the lordly impudence of this great "Bose," who declares himself Ansociate President, with his "we" and his "our," but for the mingled sorrow and indignation he feels at realizing how mean and small was the agent by whom the President was perhaps "wrought" and "perplexed in the extreme."

What a travesty on government is the spectacle of Whitelaw Reid acting as showman, and aspiring to use a President as his "puppet."

To the todies of The Regularizan:
According to what streeties to be an extract from a report made to han extract from a report made to have been approximately and the second made to have been approximately and the second made to have been approximately and of my record in reference to this question, I make the broad assertion that no postmaster in the United States has been more careful, particular, and exacting the complete for the law than I and my assistant have been.

Why this anxiety on the part of Mr. Blaine and his chief organ to relieve him from all responsibility in that wretched business." Did Mr. Blaine disapprove it? Or does he now wish to have tunderstood that he is innocent of it? Does he drend the returning sense of the American people, which he fears may yet elemand to know why one of the forement of the Same men of all this world was badgered out of the Senste and politically done to death in an Assembly "overwhelmingly Conkling?" Let us learn some more of the induces which were brought to bear upon President Garfield, and as they multiply before our eyes we shall pername find that knavish men about him deceived and exasperated him until he thought he was repelling an attack instead of making one.

Holloway, the retiring president, for his invaluable services during the inte campaign. Reports of committees on constitution and by-laws, ball, and other matters' were disposed of in their order. A motion was made and adopted that members and expensions of Congress and such other Indianians as the executive committee may recommend be thief or other criminal likely to flee from justice. On the contrary, the witnesses are taken before the grand jury and an indictment precedes arrest.

On Friday night, too late for men to give bail, sundry orderly and well-known persons were ar rested in this city upon the charge of being sureties on worthless bonds of a mail bidder, and thus conspiring to defraud the Government. They were taken to the police station and dealt with as though they had been old and well-known offenders passing through the city, and who must thus be taken on the wing.

Lieutenant Greene has sabraited a report, which has been sent to Congress, on the work done in filling up the old canal during the winter of 1880-81. The work was commenced in January and ended in June last. Mr. J. J. Barrows was appointed superintendent and alt the laborers, water-boys, &c., were selected by the palice from-among the needy and desirving poor. There were eighty-one working days, and during that time 1,541 persens were given employment. The work performed consisted of filling upa portion of the old canal about 750 feet in length. The old walls of the canal were removed, and the stone broken up for use in concrete. The report is necesspanied by plans and a detailed statement of the work performed.

The gloomy, farbidding atmosphere of yesterday failed to prevent a large attendance of Washington's best people at the funeral of one who had spent over half a century in their midst, led a life of honesty and integrily, and died last Friday in the seventy-sixth year of his age—James Towles, esq. The funeral took pince at three of clock, at his residence, No. 829 H street northwest, which, although spacelous, could contain but a small proportion of relatives and friends. The remains were coased in a magnificent state Stein casket, covered with finest black cloth, extension bar-handles, running full length on both sides, and lined with speties white satin, the head of deceased reposing on a pilliew of quilted silk. A plate on the lid was insertibed "James Towles, Bied Jannary 6, 1882. Aged seventy-six years." The officiating clergy-ham was Rev. F. A. Chick, pastor of a Bapaist clurch in Boltimore, who came hers for the purpose, and the pull-bearers were Judge Burris, Jorvian Maury, Joseph Brodus, James Frazier, William Belt, J. W. Griffin, N. D. Larner, and Major T. T. Thurlow. Funeral of James Towles.

Denth of Mr. Henjamin Miller.

Mr. Benjamin Miller, a well-known citizen of Georgetown, died at his residence, on Thirty-first street, Saturday, in the sixty-first year of his age. Mr. Miller has been confined to his home since Christmas by congestion of the right hing, but had recovered frem his trouble, and was considered much better and quite out of danger, when saddenly, almost without warning, be died from a cloi of biond at the heart. The deceased was born in Jefferson County, Va. (now West Virginia), but removed at an early age to Winchester, where he was ergaged in business until the late war, when he removed to Georgetown, in 1862 and hes been engaged in the dry goods business here since 1865. He was a vestryman of Christ F. E. Church and a director of the Farmers' and Mechanics National Bank. He leaves a widow and six children, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. Death of Mr. Benjamin Miller.

Fitz-John Porter. General Grant is reported to have changed his mind on the Fits-John Porter case, and to believe now that injustee was done that effect by his ignormalines discussed from the army twenty years ago. The public, however, will not join the "old-commander" in his change of optainor. Fits-Join Porter was fairly tried by view who had every opportunity to escurain the truth. He was sentenced to be shot and ought to have been shed. And if it had been the practice to shoot a major-general every month the war, would have ended in two years instead of lasting but years.—Gobe-Democr.d.
